SAN FRANCISCO, CA – Senior Vice President and District Director, Dennis Jang, P.E., S.E., was recently selected as the 2009 recipient of the National Taiwan University Alumni of the Class of '78 Award. This honor is bestowed in recognition of one person in the class whose accomplishment in the civil engineering field and whose contribution to society most exemplifies the high standards set by the Civil Engineering Department and the University. The award was formally presented by the Dean of the Civil Engineering Department, Chang Kuo Zing, during a luncheon held on April 25 at the University in Taipei.

National Taiwan University is a top-ranked institution for many academic fields in Taiwan and throughout the world. Mr. Jang's classmates nominated him for this prestigious award, of which only one is given to an individual 30 years after his or her graduation. Mr. Jang is responsible for overseeing the business operations of T.Y. Lin International's (TYLI) San Francisco District office. This includes managing the pursuit and development of TYLI USA's signature bridge projects in Hawaii, Canada, and the Pacific Rim. Mr. Jang is the Project Manager in charge of all construction phase support for the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

Founded in 1954, T.Y. Lin International is an internationally recognized, multi-disciplined transportation planning and engineering firm committed to providing innovative, cost-effective, constructible designs for the global transportation infrastructure market. With more than one thousand employees working in offices throughout the United States and Asia, the firm is able to provide support on projects of varying size and complexity.
